Administrative History

The Loyola Community Council was incorporated in 1969. The council was made up of neighborhood residents; there was representation from Loyola University Chicago. The purpose of the Council was to address issues in the community, including education, recreation, social activities, community goodwill, and neighborhood beautification. The area of concern consisted of both sides of Loyola, and Albion avenues, in-between Sheridan Road and the Lake.

The council sponsored several studies, including one on the educational institutions that serviced the neighborhood, one on the community's opinions and concerns about the community, and one study on the traffic and parking issues. They were actively involved in lobbying the city council on these issues, as well as the possibility of the Albion Shore Hotel into a half-way house.

Scope and Content

The papers comprise 0.25 linear feet, and contain letters, bylaws, surveys, reports, newsletters, news clippings, census lists, meeting minutes, meeting agendas, and fund raising data. Topics covered are quality of education in local schools, benefits of Catholic schools over public, congested parking, unsafe traffic patterns, enforcement of traffic laws, Loyola University Chicago's relationship with Rodgers Park neighborhood, and community activities.
