

150th ANNIVERSARY SCHOLAR SERIES /
45TH ANNUAL EDWARD L. SURTZ LECTURE
IN THE HUMANITIES

WHAT IS AT STAKE IN THE STUDY OF RACE IN THE EARLY MODERN PERIOD?

A lecture by

ANIA LOOMBA

Catherine Bryson Professor of English
University of Pennsylvania

Monday, February 22, 2021

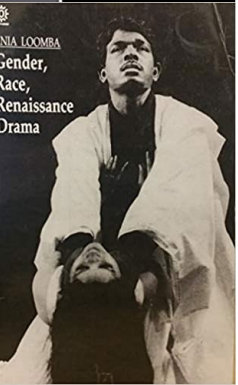

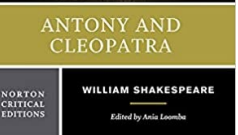

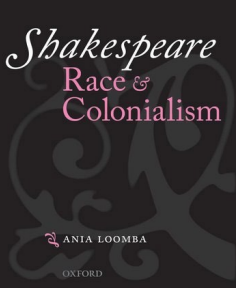

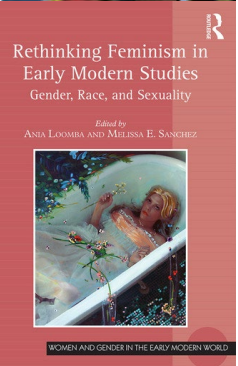

4:00 – 5:30 p.m.

Zoom Webinar

Registration Required

For more information, contact:
Ian Cornelius at icornelius@luc.edu

Ania Loomba is the Catherine Bryson Professor of English at the University of Pennsylvania and an internationally renowned scholar of early modern literature, histories of race and colonialism, postcolonial studies, feminist theory, and contemporary Indian literature and culture. She is author or editor of ten books, most recently "Rethinking Feminism in Early Modern Studies: Gender, Race and Sexuality" (Routledge, 2016), "Revolutionary Desires: Women, Communism, and Feminism in India" (Routledge, 2018), and "A Cultural History of Western Empires in the Renaissance" (Bloomsbury, 2018).

Preparing people to lead extraordinary lives