Founded by the Academy of American Franciscan History, The Americas has established itself as a leading academic forum for innovative historical research on Latin America and its Iberian heritage. We welcome submissions that explore the history and ethnohistory of Latin America, the Atlantic World and the American Borderlands. Readers of the journal will also discover a unique "Research Notes" section featuring historiographical debates and in-depth analysis of select archival documents; periodic in-depth interviews with senior scholars; and a vibrant book and film reviews section. Doctoral candidates are encouraged to apply for the journal's Academy of American Franciscan History dissertation fellowship, offered annually. For further information regarding submissions, student rate subscriptions, and the AAFH dissertation fellowship please visit our website (www.theamericasjournal.org) or contact us at: americas@drexel.edu.
