Decision rules for hospitalizing suicidal youth: Psychiatrists' decision-making process (PI)

- Mixed-methods investigation of psychiatrists' decision-making process when determining suicidal risk and subsequent disposition for children and adolescents. Data collection using surveys and focus groups. Temple University IRB approval #20239.

Telling the story of suicide: Metaphors and meanings in the stories of people who have survived a suicide or supported others through a suicidal crisis (PI)

- Analysis of stories by survivors of suicide or people who have supported someone through a suicidal crisis. Developed a storytelling website (<http://www.storytellingmural.org>) as part of the City of Philadelphia Mural Arts Program suicide prevention mural project. Temple IRB approval #20078.

Effects of youth suicidal behavior on family cohesion (PI).

- Secondary analysis of the National Longitudinal Survey of Adolescent Health (Add Health). Collaborating with Temple Dept. of Public Health biostatistician, Eugene Komoroff, Ph.D., and Kate Musliner, MPH. Temple University IRB approval #13100. Findings presented at American Association of Suicidology (2012) and the NIMH Add Health Users Conference (2012).

Social work students' knowledge of evidence-based practices for children and adolescents (PI)

- Pre-test/post-test design to evaluate whether use of the PracticeWise.com database increases students' knowledge of evidence-based practices. Temple University IRB approval #13947. Findings presented at Council on Social Work Education (2011).

Risk for suicide among college students in the health professions (2010 – 2013; Site PI – Temple University).

- Multi-university survey of suicide risk among college students developed by Matthew Wintersteen, Ph.D. at Thomas Jefferson University. Online survey of students in the College of Health Professions and Social Work. Temple University IRB approval #13096. Presented results at the American Association of Suicidology (2011).

Only as a last resort: Pathways to mental health care for mothers and their children. (2007 – 2009). Principal Investigator (dissertation).

- Qualitative analysis using constant comparative method of 60 interviews of mothers with mental illness who brought their children to mental health services. Identified a four-stage pathway to care; seven reasons why mothers sought mental health services for their children; maternal attributions for child problems.

School Social Workers, Cyberbullying and Suicide. (2007 – 2008). Co-investigator (PI, Karen Slovak, Ph.D). Funded by Ohio University Outreach and Regional Campuses. $7,085.

- Collaborated in the development of a survey looking at cyberbullying, suicide training and diversity for school social workers in the Midwest. Findings presented at annual meetings of the Council on Social Work Education (2010), Society for Social Work and Research (2011), and the American Association for Suicidology (2011).

Student Self-Efficacy, Training, and Suicide Assessment. (2005 – 2006). Principal Investigator.

- Survey investigated hypothesis that students' exposure to suicide moderates the relationship between amount and type of training in the treatment and management of suicide, and students' perceived self-efficacy in working with suicidal clients. Developed original measures. Presented results at conferences for the Society on Social Work and Research (2007) and the American Association of Suicidology (2007).

Engaging Distressed Mothers of Disturbed Children. (2004 – 2008). Graduate Research Assistant. PIs: Carol M. Anderson, Ph.D. and Catherine Greeno, Ph.D. Supported in part by NIMH R24 MH 066872.

- These projects aimed to document the mental health needs of mothers bringing their children for mental health care in community settings, and understand treatment seeking decisions of mothers referred to mental health care. Role on project: Member of research team; wrote literature reviews; analyzed qualitative data. Presented findings at Society on Social Work and Research (2007).

Technology and the professional use of self. (September 1996 to May 1997). Web design instructor and technology consultant. PIs: Bonnie Bain, LCSW, Jean Avera, LCSW, and Jane Kretzschmar, LCSW.

- This project sought to identify how web technology assisted MSW students in developing professional-use-of-self. Role on project: Member of research team; developed technological training program for MSW students; taught weekly web-design courses; dissemination of results. Presented results at CSWE APM (1997).
