Biographical History

Prudence Ann Moylan was born on July 17, 1939 in Gary, Indiana, the second of four daughters of Harriette Brazzelle and Francis Moylan. Her mother was a teacher and her father a metallurgical engineer. After graduation from Bishop Noll High School in Hammond, Indiana in 1957, Moylan attended Northwestern University for one year before transferring to St. Louis University. In 1959 she joined the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary (BVM). While a BVM novice in Dubuque, Iowa, she studied at Clark College before being sent to Mundelein College from which she graduated in 1963. Following graduation she taught at Mundelein College while taking classes at Loyola University Chicago. From January to June of 1964 she taught high school history in Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Between 1964 and 1966, as Sr. Mary Prudence, Moylan attended Stanford University in Palo Alto, CA, and taught history at Guadalupe College in Los Gatos. In March of 1966 she joined the United Farm Workers in the civil rights march from Delano to Sacramento. Later that year she achieved an MS degree from Stanford University in Modern European History. The challenges of farm life contrasted with her intellectual activities at Stanford and proved to be a transforming experience for Sr. Prudence. In 1967 she took her final vows as a member of the BVM congregation.

Sr. Prudence returned to Chicago where she taught history at Mundelein College. From California she brought to Mundelein her experience and involvement in the movement for social justice. As an instructor of history during the political unrest of 1967-1969, Sr. Prudence engaged in the movement for women's rights and, more generally, civil rights. In 1969 she commenced her doctoral study at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. In 1971 she was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship and left for England. Between 1971 and 1973 Sr. Prudence worked on her dissertation in Kent, England. In 1975 she received her Ph.D. in Modern British History from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

From 1974 to 1978, Dr. Moylan taught as an Assistant Professor of History, then as an Associate Professor and from 1986 on, Professor of History at Mundelein College. Her experience teaching in the Weekend College at Mundelein prompted Dr. Moylan to rethink course design and to pursue new pedagogies. She brought her engagement in social justice issues to all areas of her teaching, particularly to the teaching of history and Women Studies, always striving to make the courses she taught gender-inclusive and to empower her students. Though she left the BVM congregation in 1981, Dr. Moylan continued to teach at Mundelein College. When Mundelein College affiliated with Loyola University Chicago in 1991, Dr. Moylan was appointed a full Professor in Loyola University Chicago's History Department.

Dr. Moylan's professional interests vary widely and include feminism, the women's movement, peace movement, pedagogy, and theory.

Scope and Content

The Prudence Moylan Papers span the period of 1958 to 2002 and consist of seven boxes in four series. The materials are arranged alphabetically, unless noted otherwise below, and original provenance was maintained wherever possible.

Series 1: Biographical Information, 1963-2002, n.d., Box 1

This series includes Moylan's curriculum vitae, transcripts, school-related and professional correspondence, academic correspondence with Mundelein College and Loyola University, and her teaching certification. Also included is a transcript of Moylan's speech on the renewal of the BVM order.

Series 1A: Family Materials, 1958-1973, n.d., Boxes 1-2

Contains items retained by Moylan's mother, including letters that Moylan wrote to her family during different periods of her life, official letters from the BVM house at Mt. Carmel, and a photo album entitled "A Day is Time for Living." This series is arranged chronologically.

Series 2: Teaching, 1973-1999, n.d., Boxes 2-5

Includes material related to various courses taught by Moylan. These are arranged by course number and then alphabetically. Additional materials include bibliographies and general information on teaching.
